A MASTERPIECE OF THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS GALLERY

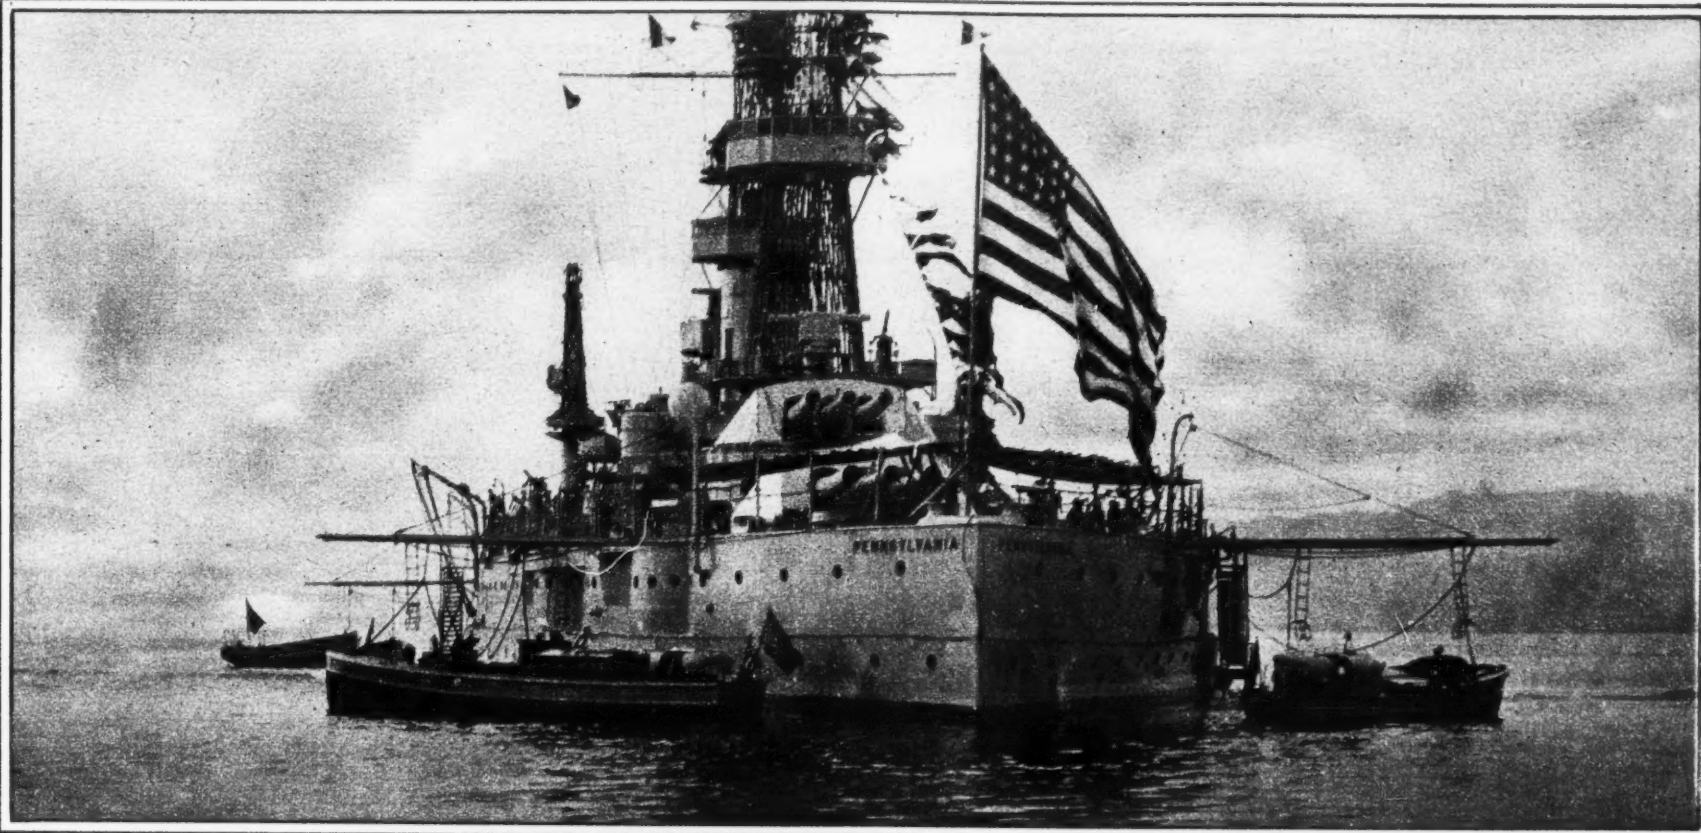

"PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG MAN"

From the Painting by Raphael Sanzio (1483-1520), the Friendly and Younger Rival of Michael Angelo. In 1508 He was Summoned to Rome by Pope Julius II. to Decorate the State Apartments of the Vatican, Where He Worked in Proximity to the Master, Then Engaged Upon the Decoration of the Sistine Chapel. His Distinguishing Qualities Were Mastery of Workmanship, Perfection of Design and of Form, Harmonious Beauty and Serenity of Expression, Balanced by Refinement of Taste and Purity of Color. On His Death the Body Lay in State With His Unfinished "Transfiguration" Suspended Above It, and He Was Buried in the Pantheon at Rome.

WHEN the sun's heat makes life far from a pleasure in most American cities and the price of gasoline begins to fall and the railroads cut excursion rates to the great national playgrounds in the Northwest, the tourist rush begins and all Summer long the mountains and parks are alive with persons heeding the slogan of "See America First!" And there are all sorts of natural wonders to be seen, both in comfort and in semi-hardship, under the direction of competent guides, who are always ready to answer the question of the visitor. Uncle Sam has taken many of the most interesting places under his protection and is preserving them as the heritage of the people. Just how many thousands of city folk return to their daily tasks each season with renewed vigor as the result of trips to the great open spaces is hard to estimate.

Woman's Emancipation from Drudgery of Housework Makes Her Freedom a New Responsibility

Super Apartments Necessary if Woman is to Keep Pace with Modern Life.

By Elisabeth H. Taylor

We have been hearing much and often about the freedom of woman. Well, they have it now, and no one, least of all women themselves, regrets the good old days. But this freedom entails newer demands on them at the same time that it frees them from the old.

The Household Drudge Is Gone

Perhaps the old-fashioned woman—chained to her dishpan, the cradle and the stove—was a drudge. If she bore children, fed and cared for them, was loyal to her husband, and not too disagreeable to have around, no one demanded anything more. Then woman discovered that she had "rights," and got them. No longer would she be merely an unsalaried servant in the house. With the aid of all the modern improvements in household science it wasn't necessary, and with the evolution of the home she found a larger leisure.

But this has brought to light a new and, to some, a painful fact. If the housewife needed no longer to be perpetually at work, she found that she had to be attractive as a companion. She now was expected to be intelligent, interested in a thousand new ideas, well dressed, and possessed of leisure to entertain and be entertaining. She had to make home interesting, if she hoped to retain the charm of the old form of family life.

Who Takes Her Place?

This remarkable change in mother's status in the family would have been quite impossible without the introduction of mechanical assistants. When the maid of all work marched out to find another kind of job, in walked the machinery that does her work quicker and better. No woman thinks of keeping house nowadays without as many modern labor-saving devices as she can call to her service. She is more particular as to where she lives, for she insists that her apartment shall be as easy to manage as her husband's office.

Efficiency Apartments

It was one of Dr. Charles V. Paterno's ideas in planning the group of co-operative apartments at Hudson View Gardens, that they should help the modern woman attain her new ideal of leisure and a more intense life. These apartments realize the dream of every real housewife, who wants to keep house thoroughly, to bring up her children in the most favorable surroundings and yet at the same time to keep young and attractive and to be the intelligent companion of her husband and children as their interests widen.

Mother Turns the Button

As for the mother of the family herself, housekeeping at Hudson View Gardens is no trouble at all. Electricity is the servant in the house. Mother merely turns the button; now she has time to enjoy life!

Electric Dishwashers

In each kitchen is a stationary, motor-driven Sani-sink dishwasher set in a porcelain receptacle. Just put the dishes in, turn on the current and in a few minutes the most and most frequent job in housekeeping is done, while you sit for the theatre or take up other more interesting work.

Automatic Refrigeration

Your kitchen is equipped with an automatic refrigerator, kept colder than ice, by a central plant. You can also make a flock of little ice cubes when you want them. There is no unpleasant ice man, no weight lifting, no dirt or dripping water to be mopped up—quite painless.

Kitchen Cabinet

A large White Cabinet is built in each kitchen. Flour and sugar bins, pot closet, cutlery drawers, bread board and box, jars for dry groceries, all are combined with a six-foot work table and pantry to make a single unit. Here there are no marathon walks in housekeeping. Forethought in planning makes light work at Hudson View Gardens.

Waste Incinerator

Garbage and other waste are instantly disposed of thru a chute with an opening in each kitchen to a Kerner Incinerator in the cellar. This sanitary system provides no harbor for dirt or germs. It means less work and no annoyance of daily garbage collection on the dumbwaiter by which foodstuffs are delivered.

Dr. Charles V. Paterno, wealthy idealist, builder of the world's largest apartment house on Park Avenue, has created Hudson View Gardens, where beautiful apartments are being sold on a money-saving and a money-back basis.

Purchasers of Co-operative Apartments Overlooking the Hudson can get full investment refunded plus interest, less rental value of apartment during term occupied, with no questions asked.

The most revolutionary policy ever adopted in the real estate field is the decision of the builder and sales agents of Hudson View Gardens, co-operative apartments occupying seven landscaped acres 300 feet above the Hudson, to express their confidence in the project by offering each purchaser the privilege of withdrawing as a tenant-owner at the end of one year's residence without sacrificing a dollar of his investment. In addition to refunding the purchaser's investment without asking why or wherefore, interest at the rate of 6% per annum will be added to the refund check.

The last of a total of fourteen units at Hudson View Gardens will be ready for occupancy October first, this year. Some are already completed and decorated, and the John Wanamaker Store has furnished three apartments for exhibition. On July 1, 1925, every tenant-owner, including all those who have purchased prior to this announcement, has the option of announcing his desire to withdraw, to take effect September 30, 1925. No reason need be advanced, and the refund is not subject to any conditions bearing on the resale of the apartment in question. The retiring owner will receive a check covering the full amount of his investment, plus interest, less one year's rent.

Merchants have tested the value of guaranteeing their merchandise to the full extent by offering to refund the purchase price of any article with which the buyer is not perfectly satisfied. The adoption of this sound policy convinces prospective purchasers of the confidence of Dr. Charles V. Paterno, who conceived and constructed Hudson View Gardens, in the perfection and permanent appeal of his ultra ideas. In addition, the unequivocal money back offer removes the last vestige of hesitation in the mind of the cautious home seeker and investor, who, wanting to live at Hudson View Gardens and approving the theory of co-operative ownership, lacks previous experience.

Concurrent with the establishment of this money-back policy, the Wood, Dolson Company, Inc., sole selling agents for Hudson View Gardens, announce that in the future no apartments will be reserved, and that present reservations automatically expire today.
